Político de extrema derecha alemán en juicio por usar eslogan nazi prohibido

Un político de extrema derecha de Alemania se encuentra actualmente en juicio acusado de haber usado eslóganes nazis prohibidos en dos mítines que tuvieron lugar en 2024.

Björn Höcke, líder del partido Alternativa para Alemania (AfD) en el estado oriental de Turingia, está acusado de haber terminado un evento electoral en Merseburg en mayo de 2024 gritando el eslogan socialista nacionalista "Todo por la patria, todo por Sajonia-Anhalt, todo por Alemania", según el tribunal regional de Halle.

Los fiscales alegaron que, a pesar de estar al tanto de que el eslogan está prohibido en Alemania y teniendo ya cargos penales relacionados con el primer incidente, Höcke lo volvió a usar en un evento del AfD en diciembre de 2024. En esa ocasión habría gritado a la multitud: "Todo por" e instado al público a responder "Alemania".

Los fiscales también afirman que Höcke era consciente de que la frase tiene su origen como eslogan de la rama paramilitar nazi.

Höcke, ex maestro de historia, tiene la intención de postularse como candidato principal del AfD en las próximas elecciones estatales en Turingia en septiembre.

Antes de su juicio, criticó a Alemania por "perseguir a los opositores políticos y suprimir la libertad de expresión". En una plataforma de medios sociales X, Höcke declaró que estaba siendo acusado por "el delito de usar una supuesta cita en la que expresé mi patriotismo 'incorrectamente'". El post de Höcke fue amplificado por Elon Musk, el propietario de X, quien respondió: '¿Qué dijiste?'

Hans-Christoph Berndt, el jefe del AfD en la región de Brandeburgo, ha sido calificado como un extremista de derecha por los servicios de inteligencia alemanes, que tienen al partido bajo vigilancia.
